LAS VEGAS (FOX5) — A 45-foot tree handpicked in Mount Shasta, California, has arrived at Bellagio for the holiday season.

The tree weighs 3,500 pounds and comes as the resort prepares to open its holiday display, “Postcards From Christmas,” at the casino’s Conservatory & Botanical Gardens.

On Monday, Bellagio shared video of workers bringing the massive tree inside for installation after its arrival from California.

The display is scheduled to run from Saturday, November 14, through Saturday, January 2, 2027, according to the casino’s website.

The conservatory is currently closed as crews continue to prepare the display. EarthCam offers a firsthand look at the progress online.

The 14,000-square-foot conservatory features seasonal displays created by its horticulture and engineering teams in collaboration with Ed Libby & Co.

The conservatory is located next to the hotel lobby and is open 24 hours a day.
