CORAL SPRINGS, FL – City officials in Coral Springs, Florida recently launched a 24/7 live camera showing the Everglades.

The service is in partnership with EarthCam, Inc., of Upper Saddle River, NJ, which offers webcam content, technology, and services, to city spokeswoman Lindsey Steinberg.

“Not only will the camera give people across the globe a glimpse of Coral Springs, our beautiful sunsets, and activity at the Everglades Loop once complete, but it will also be used by local and national meteorologists, weather professionals, traffic reporters, and environmentalists to share a view of the western edge of Coral Springs when relevant,” Steinberg explained to TAPinto Coral Springs in an email:

The camera’s view will show construction of a planned Everglades overlook area on Sportsplex Drive complete with a restaurant.

The overlook area would be part of the Everglades Loop -- a planned 10.2-mile project that would connect Coral Springs streets to the Everglades Conservation Levee including a new pedestrian bridge across the Sawgrass Expressway.
