

Boulder City selected for EarthCam's America250 project

By Alan Squires, June 5, 2026

LAS VEGAS (FOX5) — EarthCam.com has selected Boulder City as a partner to showcase 250 communities across America celebrating Independence Day.

The webcams show locations around the world in real time, allowing viewers to explore new and unique places from their homes.

EarthCam.com said the staff was looking for high-impact views and partners for America250 where July 4 festivities could be live streamed.

MORE ON FOX5: City of Las Vegas celebrates America's 250th birthday with free fireworks, drone show

"Staff applied for the opportunity to establish a camera to show Boulder City's 4th of July Damboree parade," said Ned Thomas, city manager. "EarthCam loved the concept; they were sold on the idea of showing small town, USA celebrate such a significant milestone."

Staff set up the live camera at the intersection of Nevada Way and Wyoming Avenue. The camera will show the intersection as the parade travels southbound.

EarthCam asked that the city keep the live feed downtown until after July 4, 2026, at which time the city can move it to another location.

The staff believes moving the high-quality camera to Hemenway Park to replace the current RamCam device will help reduce costs while providing the world with a view of the bighorn sheep.

Boulder City's live feed is available at www.bcnv.org/webcam. Cameras around the world can be viewed at www.earthcam.com.

Copyright 2026 KVVU. All rights reserved.